MARRIED.

By Henry Shaver, Esq., on the 17th day of January, 1864, Mr. Wm. Ward, to Miss Sarah E. Parker, both of Morgan township, Gallia county, O.

DIED.

In Gallipolis, O., January 6th, 1864, Abner, wife of S. Roberts, in the 34th year of her age.

Mrs. Roberts was born in England, on the 16th of January, 1830. In 1859 she was sent from home to school, where she remained until thoroughly educated for the duties of a teacher. She first taught in the family of her relative General Darroch, of the British Army. Her accomplishments as school-teacher and nurse, and her goodness were found to be commensurate to act as governess in the family of her uncle Col. Cutler, brother of Sir James Lawrence Cutler, Bart., of England. She arrived in New York in 1845, with others who accompanied her, and instead of going on to Col. Cutler, took charge of a school for the Rev. Mr. Watson, Episcopal Minister at Newark, New Jersey. She made her home at the residence of Mr. Lowell, (whose name is familiar to readers of the New York Ledger), until married to Mr. Roberts, at Christ Church, Newark, N. J., in June, 1850. Early in the year 1850, she was confirmed by the Rev. Mr. Lowell, Episcopal Minister at Newark.

Long months of pain and sickness Had dim'd her loving eye, And Death, the king of terrors, Was standing closely by.

Upon her brow of marble We saw the cloudy light, And knew her spirit's pinion, Were pluming for their flight.

With smothered sobs of anguish, We heard her gasp for breath, As further yet she wandered, Adown the vale of death.

A funeral service was presided by the Rev. Mr. Thompson at the Episcopal Church, to a very large, attentive, and sympathizing audience.

TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF MRS. R. M. RAY.

Mrs. RACHEL M. RAY, the wife of the Rev. J. D. Ray, died at Pilgrim's Cottage, Mount Pleasant, Gallia county, O., on Wednesday evening, at 25 minutes past 11 o'clock. She was removed from time to time to the residence of her son, Mr. J. D. Ray, in the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, where she died on the 12th of March, 1864.

By such devout and steadfast Christian parents was our deceased friend and beloved companion, from her youth up, trained; by precept and example, in the doctrines and duties of our holy religion. In the 16th year of her age, she united with the Reformed Presbyterian church, and from that day to the hour of her death, she adhered to the doctrines of God our Saviour by a consistent and habitual conformity to his revealed will. She was, indeed, sensible of those frailties and imperfections, as well as of her own unworthiness, to cleave to the best of persons in this life; but she daily looked to Jesus for grace and strength to subdue the power of indwelling sin, and to enable her to live and die for his glory. Her only surviving sister, and indeed, the only surviving member of her father's house, remarked in a letter to the writer, that "she was a praying Christian from her birth up, and her piety, her integrity, and purity of life." The same testimony might be given by hundreds, who knew her well in the relations of daughter, girl, and wife, and above all, as a meek and humble disciple in the school of Christ, in which she excelled many in Christian knowledge and experience, whose advantages in some respects, were far superior to hers.

On the 24th of October, 1856, the Rev. J. D. Ray and this lovely, devout, and interesting girl were united in the sacred bonds of matrimony, at her mother's house, in Canonsburg, Pennsylvania, amidst those scenes of festivity and rejoicing, and of thoughtful and serious reflection, which usually accompany such occasions. In a short time after this, they removed to Mount Carmel, and during the pastorate of her husband over the churches of Mount Carmel, the North Branch, and Mount Taber, Virginia, embracing a period of about 25 years, no woman could have more faithfully and conscientiously performed the arduous, and often perplexing duties of a pastor's wife. Amidst all these labors, she won the esteem and affection of those congregations, in a degree to which few ministers' wives attain in the present day. Honored and beloved by the better classes of society, whether rich or poor, she patiently endured the toils, and duly appreciated the enjoyments incident to her social position, and "as she had opportunity, she sought to do good to all, especially to them who are of the household of faith."—Gal. 6: 10.

Mrs. Ray died in the full assurance of hope. But it is the living testimony more than the dying, that she is regarded as the true criterion of Christian character. Viewed in this light, she was truly "a living epistle, written not with pen and ink, but by the spirit of the living God, known and read of all men." During her late illness, she was remarkably free from pain and suffering. And though occasionally troubled with doubts and fears, these were all graciously removed, and with calmness and composure she viewed her approaching end. Resting alone for salvation on the righteousness of Christ, without a struggle or a groan, and in perfect peace, she "passed through the valley of shadow of death" to the light and glory of heaven. She leaves a devoted and disconsolate husband, with numerous relatives and friends, to deplore her removal from this life, though well assured she is now numbered with "the spirits of the just made perfect" in the Paradise of God. He died a victim of loneliness he never felt before. Deprived of his bosom friend, one who was ever to him a faithful and affectionately devoted wife, the comfort of his youth and of his ripe years, of his sorrows and his joys, he now stands as if he were solitary and alone, amidst the chilling blasts and howling tempest of a friendless and despairing world. And yet is fully assured, "God is his refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." Ps. 46: 1.

On the 18th instant, our beloved friend and brother, the Rev. John Rowe, of Gallipolis, passed peacefully to the life beyond. Our deceased friend, an excellent and very appropriate discourse from 2 Cor. 5: 1. "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, and an eternal habitation in the heavens." After pointing out the frailty of the human tabernacle, he illustrated the durability of the house not made with hands, and stated the qualifications necessary to be possessed by us, to be occupants of "the house eternal in the heavens." He then closed with a brief delineation of the character of the deceased; and a solemn, affectionate, and consolatory address to the bereaved husband. The funeral services being closed, her mortal remains were conveyed to the Smetzer Grave-yard, followed by many neighbors and friends, and there interred in the cold and silent grave. Fully assured "the hour is coming in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of judgment."—1 Cor. 15: 22.

It is a solemn thing to deposit the bodies of our deceased friends in "the house appointed for all living;" and to return with grief and sorrow to our once happy home, made sad and desolate by the departure of our loved one forever. Oh! if it were not for "the hope of eternal life," the hope of meeting them again in another and a better world, this weight of sorrow, and grief, would crush us to the earth. Death may subdue us for a time, and separate us from "the fondness of a creature's love;" but he is a conquered enemy. The dying Christian well knows that "the sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law;" and as he approaches the borders of eternity, he utters the song of triumph—"Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."—1 Cor. 15: 56.

The grateful thanks of the bereaved and disconsolate husband are hereby tendered to his neighbors and friends for their kind attentions during the illness, death, and burial of his beloved wife. And the depths of his heart, he ever desires gratefully to remember the almost daily visits of two female friends, and their kind ministrations to the desires and wants of the afflicted partner of his sorrows and his joys. May he be not say to them, as Naomi said to Orpah and Ruth? "The Lord deal kindly with you, as ye have dealt with the dead, and with me."—Ruth, 1: 8. Of one of them in particular, our dear dying husband often observed, that "her benevolence and sympathy surpassed the kindness of a sister's love." They did what they could; and their various acts of friendship and of love of kindness, will stand as a lasting memorial of their readiness to visit and relieve the sick and afflicted, and of their tender and respectful regard for the living and the dead.

For more than thirty-seven years, the bereaved and lamented deceased sustained with honor and dignity the conjugal relation. When health permitted, few, if any, excelled her in economy and industry, and in her unwearied attention to her household affairs. "The heart of her husband did safely trust in her, and she did him good, and not evil, all the days of her life." And though they had their changes and trials, yet few have had more domestic felicity, peace, harmony, and Christian enjoyment, than fell to their lot. The shock of separation from so good a wife, whose governing virtue was her uniform Christian character, cannot be described. A beloved friend recently remarked to the writer, that "Mrs. Ray was the most perfect woman she ever knew." Hundreds of the poor and needy have largely shared in the gifts of her Christian benevolence, and those of every class have partaken of the bounties of her table, and have reaped the fruits of her economy and industry. Her life was a "life of faith on the part of God," her death peaceful and happy, and her "rest" is now, and ever shall be, "glorious" in the presence of her Saviour and her God.

Medical Notice.

THE undersigned having located at Harrisburg, Gallia county, Ohio, for the purpose of practicing Medicine, respectfully tenders his services to the surrounding public.

S. ROBERTS,

The well-known Tailor and Cutter, who has been amongst us for the last 8 years, and established the reputation of some of the leading Tailoring shops of Gallipolis, thinks he has done enough for these in that line of business, and is determined to see what he can do for himself. He has opened a shop on Second street, below the Public Square, opposite C. C. Wiser's Bakery, where he will remain until a better stand can be obtained. He is prepared to cut or make up CUSTOM WORK of every grade. He has connected himself with the Dry Goods Store of this place, and can save his customers an expense of from $5.00 to $10.00 on each suit of clothes. Parents wishing good fitting garments for children, would do well to give him a call. He gives that branch of the business particular attention.
